Class History

The curtain rose on a cast of 42 as we entered our Freshman year. Mrs. Hunter Patrick was our director. Stealing the limelight was Don Nichols, receiving a letter in sports.

Oscars were won in our second year of high school by Judy Gaylord and Rosalie Manzanares, who were chosen cheerleaders. Don Nichols lettered in sports again. Missing from our cast this year were Eugene Ashby, Jerry Bailey, Arnold Corbridge, Florence Corder, Carol Sue Evanoff, Ronald Fisher, Lynn Martin, Charles McClearn, Larry Myers, Mary Jane Nesbit, Richard Overy, Shirley Peterson, Jeanette Podbevsek, Sue Rollins, Charles Spurgeon, Hope Sturman, Freddie Wall, and Joan Williams. Our director, Mr. Thomas Manatos, welcomed two new actresses to help with the show. They were Lola Coulter and Greta Croft.

Everyone got an oscar in our junior year in the form of class rings. Stars in the show were Carmen Esparza, Tony Nelson, Franklin Baker, and Bob Spence. Mr. Harold Siebenaler was the director. One of the main events this year was our prom, Hawaiian Nights, with Lila Kalinowski as queen and Judy Gaylord and Rosalie Manzanares as attendants. Jim While, Franklin Baker, and Don Nichols received letters in sports, and Marjane Telck went to Girls' State.

Our winning picture as seniors was "Laughing Gas." Another big event was our hop, "Snowland", with Bob Spence being crowned king and Jimmy and Jerry Boling as attendants. Missing from our cast were Lila Kalinowski, Tony Nelson, and Connie Goddard. Now as we march down the aisle to receive our diplomas, we look back on all these wonderful memories as the curtain falls on our high school days.

In The Crystal Ball

In the dimly lighted room, the ancient prophetess peers into the crystal ball, foreseeing and foretelling the future for the class of 1957. As she begins the propheey, her voice quakes, and her head shakes continually.

"I see Carmen Esparza ringing a bell on the corner for the Salvation Army. And here is James Boling, a professor of English at Colorado Woman's College." The lady pauses. Her eyes seem to illuminate the dark room. Slowly she begins again.

"Now I see Vivian Arguello as a famous operatic star on the Metropolitan stage. Ah! Who is this little figure in a convent cloister? It seems to be Rosalie Manzanares, reverently telling her beads. And that blond on the platform there, barnstorming across country, is Karmen Kragovich, active President of the W.C.T.U.". Suddenly the ball clouds over, and the ancient crone waits for it to clear again. As it does, she leans forward with a mirthful cackle.

"Well, well. 'Here is Nora Robinson, a fan dancer at the SANDS in Las Vegas. She is really packing them in. And Jean Wilkes is a bespangled operator of the roulette wheel. Across the street, the drawing card is Greta Croft, a famous wrestler." A sudden deluge of smoke appears in the ball, but quickly disappears. Again the seer stares aghast at the ball.

Do these old eyes deceive me? Here is Judy Gaylord, a spinster, sitting by the fireside with her faithful old dog. And she is listening to the radio, where the familiar voice of the announcer, Cibila Garcia, awakens old memories of high school days. Lola Coulter, head of the Worland Industrial School, is broadcasting the escape of two of her charges." A stillness pervades the room. Then, in quivering tones, the future continues unfolding.

"I catch a glimpse of Jim While coaching the girls' basketball team at Vassar. Strangely enough, he seems quite happy with this occupation. Here is Bob Spence in a swank office as Human Relations expert. The lettering on the neighboring office door indicates that it is the Lonely Hearts Club. There Jerry Boling presides as president. Don Nichols is successful owner of a chain of women's clothing stores. I see Frank Baker living sumptuously in a mansion, since he is now owner of Standard Oil. Jim Watson is gliding to fame as the most graceful member of an Arthur Murray dance team. And there on Broadway the glimmering lights proclaim Marjane Telek as a versatile star of stage and screen.

"That is all I can see. The vision fades." The crystal ball clouds over, and the propheey is ended.
